New St. Charles Hotel

New Orleans is the Mecca of Tourists

The completion of the new addition and the Turkish, and Russian Baths makes the St. Charles one of the largest as well as one of the best and most attractive hotels in the country.

The addition, like the main building, is strictly fire-proof throughout. The St. Charles is in all respects a modern hotel with every essential to satisfy the most refined idea of comfort and luxury. It contains 500 parlors and bed-rooms, alcoved, single or en-suite, affording accommodation for 700 guests. There are 500 private bath rooms, with porcelain-lined Tubs and tiled walls.

The Turkish and Russian Baths are of white marble, with all the latest hygienic structural appliances and appointments for comfort, health and luxury.

The Hotel is steam-heated, and lighted throughout with electricity. An open-air promenade, filled with tropical plants and shrubbery, occupying the space between the wings of the building on second floor, with entrances from the parlors, hall and dining rooms, affords a delightful lounging place in sunshine or shade.

The hotel is centrally located, with entrances on St. Charles, Common and Gravier streets, within easy access of places of amusement, depots and the shopping quarter.

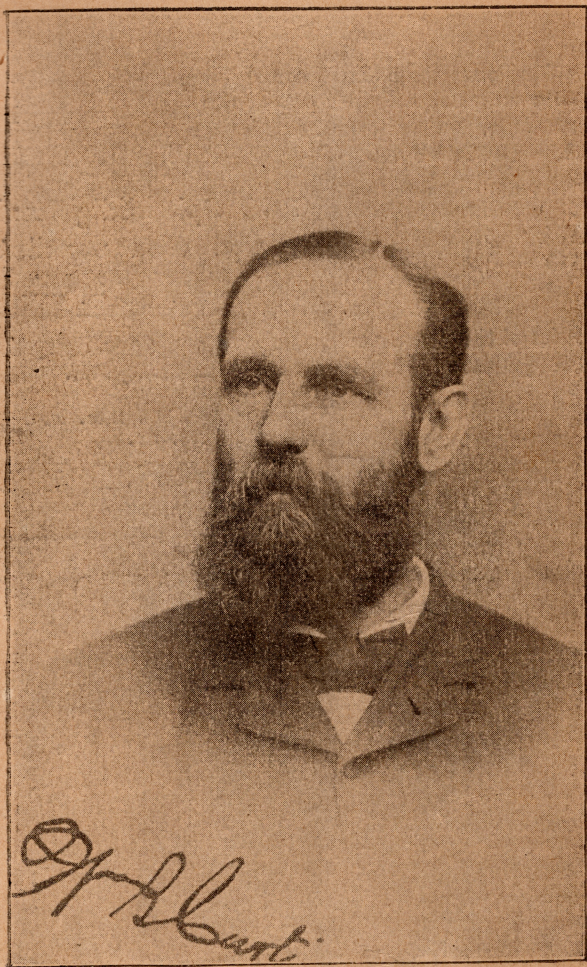

The drinking water is filtered, distilled and aerated, and from it the ice is made on the premises. Both are absolutely pure.

The hotel is kept on the American plan at moderate prices. Transient rates are from $3 per day up, according to size and location of room.

The attractions of New Orleans as a point of romantic and historic interest, transcending in this respect any other city of the country, are as well known as the story of its annual carnival.

For those desirous of escaping the rigors of the northern winters, New Orleans, with its balmy breezes, perennial gardens and inexhaustible fund of amusements, will be found one of the most delightful resorts on the American continent.
